

Investment Division Rotational Program

"Manulife's Investment Division Rotational Program (IDRP) was an incredible experience. I had the exciting opportunity to work with Manulife Asset Management's Global Equity, Real Estate and Fixed Income Groups, as well as, the Hancock Natural Resource Group in Boston, Massachusetts. In each rotation, I was able to work with more than one analyst, which provided me with exposure to a number of sectors and a variety of investment analysis styles. My analytical skills were tested continuously, as I assisted analysts with research studies, conducted both industry and firm specific analysis and built financial models of current and future investment prospects. The IDRP program has been an excellent complement to my academic training and has provided me with the knowledge necessary to achieve my future career goals."

Jonathan
Analyst, Investment Division Rotational Program

"The program offers a unique way to build a broad understanding of the asset management business while gaining great experience and making real contributions to the business through a variety of meaningful and challenging roles. My time in the program helped me to better understand my own strengths, weaknesses and interests that much more, and left me well-equipped to continue on in my career at Manulife."
