Market Review

ASEAN equities were largely flat. Renewed uncertainty over the US Federal Reserve's (FED) potential rate cut in the December meeting weighed on market sentiment. That said, ASEAN markets fared well. During the month, Philippine equities performed well, while Thai equities lagged.

Indonesian equities posted gains. Q3 2025 earnings season concluded. While overall results still pointed to a soft macro environment, there have been sequential improvement from the previous quarter, with consumer and healthcare sectors notably performing. Q3 2025 Q3 GDP (gross domestic product) growth (5.1% year-on-year) was in line with expectations, driven by household consumption and net trade. On the policy front, the government expanded support for small businesses with a new loan guarantee scheme and digital economy initiatives.

Malaysian equities moved higher. The successful hosting of the ASEAN Summit, with participation of global leaders from Chinese Mainland and US, has showcased Malaysia's proactive diplomatic efforts. Meanwhile, Q3 2025 GDP came in at 5.2% year-on-year (YoY). Growth was broad-based, led by manufacturing, construction, and a rebound in mining, while services remained resilient.

Philippine equities corrected in the first half of the month, given softer-than-expected Q3 2025 GDP growth, but recovered the losses subsequently. Q3 2025 GDP growth came in at 4.0% YoY, weighed by lower fixed asset investment and private consumption, amid governance concerns over public infrastructure spending and typhoon disruptions. This has led to market expectations over further monetary easing in the December Central Bank meeting.

Singapore equities were largely flat. The Monetary Authority of Singapore (MAS) continued to roll out supportive capital market measures, including a SGX-NASDAQ dual listing bridge, a SGD30-million value unlock program for encouraging shareholder engagement, and reduced board lot sizes for high-priced stocks to boost retail access. Q3 2025 GDP growth (final) was revised sharply upwards at 4.2% YoY (from advance), driven mainly by a surge in pharmaceutical manufacturing and higher services output.

Thai equities pulled back. Q3 2025 GDP growth decelerated to 1.2% YoY, driven by reduced fiscal spending after a government change, and slower manufacturing and construction activities (due to labor shortage from a border conflict with Cambodia). On the other hand, exports and private investment in industrial plants remained resilient, supported by foreign direct investments (FDIs) and the "Thailand Fast Pass" initiative.

Outlook

Despite a volatile geopolitical landscape, significant uncertainties in the global macroeconomic environment, and higher-than-expected trade tariffs whose full impact is yet to be felt, equity markets continue to rise. This rally has been largely driven by accommodative monetary policies from central banks and a softer US dollar. In the absence of strong earnings growth, the performance of Asian equity indices has primarily been supported by valuation re-ratings and foreign exchange gains. Another notable characteristic of Asian markets is the prevalence of crowded trades and high market concentration, particularly in Singapore equities within ASEAN. For the rally to be sustainable, earnings growth must accelerate meaningfully. There is concern that even a slight deviation from lofty investor expectations could trigger sharp market corrections. At current levels, we believe both earnings and market risk are being underestimated.

YTD, equities in most ASEAN markets lagged. Investment sentiment has been weighed down by a weakening earnings growth outlook, political uncertainties in Indonesia, Thailand, and the Philippines and lingering global trade policy risks. Additionally, rising competition from Chinese companies entering various ASEAN sectors has pressured the earnings of some local firms. Export-oriented corporates are holding back on capacity expansion amid uncertainty over the potential impact of Trump's tariff. Despite the challenging environment, we believe coordinated efforts by governments, central banks, and corporates are underway to navigate these headwinds.

In Indonesia, the appointment of Finance Minister Purnayan Yuchi Sadowa signals a pro-growth policy stance. The government has injected IDR200 trillion in deposits (2.2% of total system deposits) into key state-owned banks of Indonesia to ease funding pressure and support credit growth. This is complemented by Bank Indonesia's recent 25 basis points (bps) rate cut in September, bringing the total easing to 150 bps in the past 12 months. While policy transmission will take time, we believe the concerns over cabinet reshuffling and softer-than-expected economic growth are largely priced in. More importantly, Indonesia's macro fundamentals remain solid. In our view, current weakness presents an opportunity to accumulate high-quality, dividend-paying stocks at attractive valuations, with a favorable long-term risk/reward profile.

Thai equities have faced a series of headwinds, including border tensions with Cambodia, the Prime Minister's resignation and subsequent regime change, a recent earthquake, tariff-related uncertainties, and a weaker-than-expected recovery in the tourism sector. The manufacturing sector, once a key growth driver, is under pressure from competitively priced Chinese imports – particularly in the electric vehicle (EV) segment, where Chinese players are gaining market share. Elevated household debt continues to weigh on domestic consumption, further dampening consumer and investor confidence. However, the newly formed government under Prime Minister, Anutan Carnival has announced a series of stimulus measures to address economic challenges:

- Co-payment scheme: Continuation of the "Kon La Krueng" program, subsidizing 50% of certain food and consumer goods for eligible citizens.
- Debt relief: Provision of support for individuals with debt under THB100,000 (~USD3,100) and liquidity assistance of up to THB1 million for small businesses.
- Cost reduction: Implementation of measures designed to reduce living costs, including the lowering of energy and transportation fares.

The newly appointed Central Bank governor has also signaled a more accommodative monetary stance to support growth. Like Indonesia, much of the negative news is already reflected in valuations. High-quality Thai companies with strong balance sheets and cash flows offer compelling long-term investment opportunities.

USD ASEAN Growth Fund

While the Philippines is relatively insulated from the impact of potential US tariffs, the market continues to be constrained by limited depth and liquidity, which has weighed on stock performance. Despite this, it remains one of the least crowded markets in ASEAN and boasts some of the highest earnings growth, based on FY26e estimates, in the region. As long-term investors, we believe the market's growth potential is underappreciated, offering attractive opportunities to accumulate fundamentally sound stocks at compelling valuations.

The Singapore equity market continues to notably perform the ASEAN region and trading near all-time highs. Investor enthusiasm has been partly fueled by initiatives from the Monetary Authority of Singapore (MAS) that are aimed at revitalizing the local equity market. These policies are designed to enhance Singapore Exchange's competitiveness as a listing and trading venue by attracting more IPOs and boosting investor participation. The small and mid-caps have enjoyed a stock rally on the back of it. However, recent gains have largely been driven by multiple re-rating while underlying earnings growth remains subdued. Despite this, Singapore remains as one of the most crowded markets in the region. In our view, a meaningful acceleration in earnings growth will be essential for the rally to be sustained. The risk-reward profile of Singapore equities appears less compelling relative to other opportunities in the region. Against such backdrop, we are focused on selectively identifying companies with the potential to deliver strong earnings growth in FY26e, but whose prospects remain underappreciated by the market due to a lack of near-term catalysts.

Malaysian equities have remained relatively resilient compared to other ASEAN markets. Investor interest continues to center on growth opportunities stemming from the Malaysia's expanding data center infrastructure. We expect this momentum to spill over into broader development initiatives, including the Johor-Singapore special economic zones and Malaysia Vision Valley 2.0 – a state-led private sector-driven development project designed to complement the growth of Greater Kuala Lumpur. We believe the long-term development of such economic zones will support earnings growth for landowners with strategic landbank in these areas. On the macro front, the government has introduced measures to support domestic consumption, helping to cushion the impact of fiscal consolidation through subsidy rationalization.

Vietnam won an upgrade to "emerging market" status from FTSE Russell after years of capital-market reforms. While This is a positive long-term development, we believe the market may face several near-term headwinds, including:

- "Sell-the-news" pressure as some investors take profits and frontier funds begin to divest ahead of the official emerging market inclusion;
- Currency depreciation;
- Elevated margin lending; and
- A surge in capital-raising activity, which may temporarily crowd out fresh inflows.

We also remain cautious about the export growth trend following two rounds of export frontloading YTD. There are already signs of deceleration of export growth in key export categories such as machinery, equipment, tools and instruments, textiles and garments and telephones and components. That said, we continue to actively seek stock ideas and are prepared to take positions when the risk adjusted return profile becomes compelling.

In conclusion, amid heightened uncertainty and volatile policymaking, we believe the market will increasingly reward corporate resilience. We remain highly disciplined in our stock selection, focusing on businesses with robust financial positions and sustainable long-term growth prospects.
