Market Review

US stocks advanced strongly in April, with the S&P 500 Index posting its biggest monthly gain since November 2020. Better-than-expected first-quarter earnings for a widening swath of technology and non-tech companies, solid economic data, and subsiding tensions in Iran fueled stock rises and offset concerns about sticky inflation, tariff turmoil, and the health of US consumers. Within the broad-based S&P 500 Index, the communication services, information technology (IT), and consumer discretionary sectors posted double-digit gains, while the energy and healthcare sectors modestly declined.

Outlook

Looking ahead, we see several tailwinds we believe can drive improved results for the portfolio in the coming years. Several of our positions are priced as though yet-to-materialize deterioration is inevitable. Yet our analysis indicates that consistent execution alone should be enough to drive multiple expansions for many such holdings. Second, we anticipate improving results across software, as AI-driven revenue generation becomes more tangible, and healthcare, as fears around cost inflation begin to moderate. Finally, we believe company-specific fundamentals will reassert themselves as the primary driver of individual stock returns and favor our disciplined, bottom-up research-driven approach.

The investment fund option for The Manufacturers Life Insurance Company's variable life insurance product is managed by Manulife Investment Management and Trust Corporation.

The Fund mentioned in this document is specific to variable life insurance contracts and is not considered a mutual fund. Yields depend on interest and foreign exchange rate levels, both of which may fluctuate. Other factors that affect yield include changes in the credit standing of the issuers and changes in the value of the stocks and dividends received. Further, investments of the Fund may provide that their values be determined based on prices or yields of other securities, instruments or foreign currencies, and such provisions may result in negative fluctuations in the value of these investments and, in turn, the Fund's yields. Thus, the performance of the separate account(s) is not guaranteed and the value of the policy could be less than the capital invested. THE VARIABLE LIFE POLICYHOLDER SHALL BEAR ALL INVESTMENT RISKS. Past performance of the Fund is not necessarily indicative of future performance. Yields are not guaranteed.
