Market Review

The US stock market posted strong monthly gains. Signs of progress in trade negotiations and easing tensions between the US and China aided returns. Strong consumer spending trends, better-than-expected first-quarter corporate earnings, encouraging inflation data, and improving consumer confidence also helped. These tailwinds outweighed continued uncertainty around tariffs and the US economic outlook. Within the Standard & Poor's (S&P) 500 Index, the growth-oriented information technology, consumer discretionary, and communication services sectors notably performed. Conversely, the more defensive healthcare sector declined, while the real estate and energy sectors posted flat returns.

Outlook

We are encouraged by recent developments regarding trade negotiations, although how the tariff situation will play out is still unclear. We believe the portfolio is well positioned for a variety of scenarios, given its balance between offense and defense. The Fund ends the period with roughly 32% of its assets in the information technology sector, which is in line with the S&P 500 Index, a notable overweight in the consumer discretionary sector, and a sizable underweight in the industrials sector.

The Fund mentioned in this document is specific to variable life insurance contracts and is not considered a mutual fund.
