Market Review

Following the Bangko Sentral Ng Pilipinas' off-cycle hike on July 15, the yield curve flattened significantly as the short-end bears the brunt of monetary policy tightening while easing inflation expectations supported sentiment on the intermediate tenors to the long-ends. The improvement in sentiment was reflected in the bond auctions as the Bureau of Treasury was finally able to issue 10y and 13y bonds within or better than secondary market levels and raised additional amounts in the tap facility post-auction. The lack of supply on the long-ends also reinforced demand, with the market rallying significantly on that part of the curve.

Outlook

Against the backdrop of the improved inflation outlook, we will keep a neutral duration vis-à-vis the benchmark while taking advantage of possible buying opportunities given renewed interest for local bonds.
