Market Review

The Philippine Stock Equity index (PSEi) declined by 3% from the prior month to end the year at 6,733. The decline in December was driven mostly by profit taking following a 15% in the prior two months. For 2022, PSEi lost 5.9%. The Philippine peso for 2022 was weaker by 9%, mostly due to the strong US Dollar coupled with our widening trade deficit.

December inflation was persistently high at 8.1% year on year, from November's 8% print. According to the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP), there is a likelihood that we'll see inflation peak already in December. In addition, BSP raised policy rates by another 50bps in December, following the move of the US Federal Reserve. The BSP raised rates by a cumulative 350 bps for 2022. With easing pressure on inflation, the BSP indicated that we could see a slowdown in rate hikes in 2023. This reduced the pressure on currency, bringing it to the P55 level to the US$. Recall it was trading closer to P59 to the dollar back in October.

Outlook

We have a positive view on Philippine Equities as attractive valuations and strong corporate earnings would provide tailwinds to market. Currently, the Philippine Equity Index is trading at around 13.5x forward price to earnings, a slight discount to historical average of around 15x. The Philippines is a consumption driven economy and would be more defensive amidst slowing global trends. It helps that the macroeconomic picture is improving with inflation likely to peak in the near term in the Philippines, reducing the pressure on further rate hikes.
