Market Review

The Philippine Stock Exchange Index rallied in June, increasing by 2.6% ending the month at 6,315.93. The local equities market rallied in the latter part of the month on the back of investors gaining confidence that the new administration is committed toward the growth of the economy as highlighted in the President Ferdinand Marcos Jr.'s first State of the Nation Address (SONA). Likewise, the Philippine Peso appreciated in the latter part of the month after the surprise rate hike by the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas amidst easing global commodity prices.

Inflation remains a key concern for the market and it clocked at 6.4% in July, still higher vs the previous month. However, falling prices of key global commodities such as crude oil, wheat, and building materials could help ease inflation concerns going forward. For example, retail pump prices of gasoline dropped by around 12% in Manila during the month. Note that during the same month, the BSP hiked policy rates by 75bps, a surprise move to contain inflation and defend the currency. The BSP added that they are likely to raise policy rates by another 25 to 50bps in August. Meanwhile, GDP growth in 2Q22 came at only 7.4%, a deceleration compared to 8.2% in the previous quarter. There was a contraction on domestic consumption quarter on quarter driven mostly by higher prices of goods.

The 2Q22 corporate earnings results season concluded in August with the overall earnings growth for the period at 20% year on year. Corporates reported strong topline revenue growth amidst the economy that is practically fully open. The standout sector was consumer discretionary, posting strong topline growth that was able to offset any margin compression. However, there were few sectors that saw margin compression eating into profits such as select consumer staple companies highly dependent on imported raw materials. The shopping mall segment saw a sharp recovery in revenues with mall foot traffic already at pre-pandemic levels. Meanwhile the financial sector reported an acceleration in loan growth, implying potential net interest income acceleration.

Outlook

We have a positive bias towards Philippine equities given the improving macroeconomic picture. This is reinforced by the positive 2Q22 corporate earnings results that showed sustained domestic consumption recovery from the pandemic. Meanwhile, we are cognizant that the risks are not entirely gone as inflation remains high and central banks are still hiking interest rates albeit at a slower pace. We prefer sectors that benefit on strong domestic consumption such as consumer discretionary and staples. We also favor the financial sector on the back of increasing economic activity that results to an acceleration in loan growth.

The Fund mentioned in this document is specific to variable life insurance contracts and is not considered a mutual fund.
