Market Review

China equities pulled back slightly for the month on profit-taking after a strong year-to-date (YTD) 2025 rally. On the policy front, the Central Economic Work Conference signaled policy continuity and reiterated the government's policy focus. In terms of policy priorities, demand revival remains one of the top focuses, followed by innovation, reform, and opening. In terms of fiscal policy, the government pledged to maintain a "necessary" fiscal deficit, debt level, and spending scale. In terms of monetary policy, the stance remains "monetary loose" with potential rate cuts as tools in supporting growth.

For China A-shares, materials posted gains on the back of favorable commodity pricing and supply-demand dynamics. Tech and industrials have rebounded, led by tech hardware, commercial aerospace, and robotics segments. Real estate lagged amid soft property sales.

Hong Kong equities posted marginal losses on the back of year-end consolidation. Rotation into defensive sectors continued. On the economic front, retail sales continued to recover and beat estimates at 6.9% (year-on-year) in December.

Outlook

Going into 2026, we maintain a positive view in Greater China equity markets due to the following reasons:

1. Stabilizing economy: Tariff and geopolitical issues between China and the US have stabilized, which is favorable for Greater China equity markets. China and the US agreed to a pause in additional reciprocal tariffs (i.e. delay for one year) and shipping industry trade investigations. This is positive and reinforces our view that more potential dialogue between China and the US may drive better outcomes. Also, the relative tariff difference vs. other non-China geographical regions has narrowed.
2. Supportive fund flows for China/HK equity markets: A lower rate environment and a potentially weaker USD may drive more fund flows to emerging markets, i.e. positive for the Greater China equity market.
3. China's 15th 5-year plan: China's 15th 5-year plan lays out clear policy and strategic directions over the next five years, which should drive the next leg of growth.
4. Less concerning deflationary pressure: Service consumption and trade-in policies have positively fueled CPI growth this year, and we expect the CPI to trend higher should domestic demand improve further.
5. Green shoots in HK property market: The Hong Kong property sector shows signs of recovery, driven by three factors: (1) expectation of the US Federal Reserve's rate cuts (now with positive carry); (2) improving transaction volumes; and (3) modest price recovery. We favor companies with strong buyback ability and supportive dividend yields.

With tariff noise subsiding, we believe there are varied investment opportunities in China in technology, industrials, energy, healthcare, and new/niche/experienced consumption.

The Fund mentioned in this document is specific to variable life insurance contracts and is not considered a mutual fund. Yields depend on interest and foreign exchange rate levels, both of which may fluctuate. Other factors that affect yield include changes in the credit standing of the issuers and changes in the value of the stocks and dividends received. Further, investments of the Fund may provide that their values be determined based on prices or yields of other securities, instruments or foreign currencies, and such provisions may result in negative fluctuations in the value of these investments and, in turn, the Fund's yields. Thus, the performance of the separate account(s) is not guaranteed and the value of the policy could be less than the capital invested. THE VARIABLE LIFE POLICYHOLDER SHALL BEAR ALL INVESTMENT RISKS. Past performance of the Fund is not necessarily indicative of future performance. Yields are not guaranteed.
