Market Review

Chinese equities moved lower for the month amid mixed macro data and geopolitical concerns, despite continued policy measures. On the policy front, the third Plenum provided high-level direction of key reform areas by 2029, including tech self-sufficiency, new productive force, macro governance, social welfare, urban-rural development and fiscal and taxation systems. Meanwhile, the China Securities Regulatory Commission (CSRC) announced suspension of stock delisting to curb short-selling and stabilize capital market. On the monetary front, the People's Bank of China (PBoC) reduced the 7-day reverse repo rate, 1-year and 5-year loan prime rates by 10 bps, signaling the first broad-based cuts among both short-term and long-term interest rates since August 2023. On the economic front, despite softer-than-expected Q2 2024 GDP (gross domestic product) growth and retail sales in June, industrial production and exports in June beat estimates. Caixin manufacturing and service Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI) also remained expansionary.

China A-shares posted slight losses. Real estate rose as contracted sales of top 100 developers for June came in better-than-expected (+36% month-on-month) while secondary home sales in tier-1 cities also demonstrated improvement. State-owned enterprises (SOEs) dividend names rose as authorities reiterated the importance of market value management.

Elsewhere, Hong Kong equities posted losses overall, yet utilities remained resilient. On the economic front, Q2 2024 GDP growth came in at 3.3% year-on-year which was better than expected.

Outlook

Post China's third Plenum, it is evident that Mainland China has stepped up with concrete measures by announcing details of various programs and initiatives, which is encouraging. Mainland China not only focuses on long term structural reform, but also on short term economic targets. In shorter term, Mainland China strives to (1) achieve 2024 growth target and (2) support domestic demand.

For policy tailwinds, the State Council issued Mainland China's 2024-2025 carbon reduction action plan with an aim to achieve carbon peaking in 2030 and carbon neutrality goals in 2060. Meanwhile, authorities drafted rules on reducing supply of carbon permits to lower greenhouse gas emissions. We favor beneficiaries of Mainland China's long-term renewable energy roadmap.

For innovations, Mainland China will allocate RMB300 billion from proceeds raised in ultra-long special government bonds to promote its equipment upgrade and trade-in program. Meanwhile, the State Council evaluated an action plan to support the innovative drug industry and encouraged government agencies to deploy policies on pricing, medical insurance payments and commercial insurance to promote innovative drugs. We view investment in advanced manufacturing, innovation in tech and health care as medium-term structural opportunities.

For consumptions, Mainland China's e-commerce sector demonstrated robust growth in H1 2024, with online sales growth of 9.8% year-on-year. This has been fueled by digital products, services consumption, and trade-in programs. Meanwhile, Mainland China also recorded 152.7% year-on-year growth for inbound trips by foreigners in H1 2024, thanks to favorable measures, including the expansion of visa-free policies and others. We favor select opportunities within consumer sectors, including e-commerce, service consumption names.
