Market Review

Chinese equities posted slight gains for the month on the back of better-than-expected economic data for March, including manufacturing and non-manufacturing PMI, export and import data, and others. On the policy front, major policy announcements during the National People's Congress (NPC) meeting have been in line with expectations. Mainland China set the 2024's real gross domestic product (GDP) growth target at around 5% and budget deficit at 3% of the GDP, as well as announced another RMB 1 trillion of special sovereign bond, while keeping 1-year and 5-year loan prime rates (LPRs) unchanged at 3.45% and 3.95%, respectively.

For China A-shares, materials performed well with rally among non-ferrous metals and gold names, thanks to higher commodity prices. Consumer discretionary was also boosted by artificial intelligence (AI)-related names and auto names amid encouraging auto sales. On the other hand, real estate was under pressure due to soft housing market data.

Elsewhere, Hong Kong equities were flat. Materials and energy performed well on sector rotation to higher yielding names, while information technology (IT) also posted strong performance with robust earnings by leading internet companies.

Outlook

Overall, recovery activities in industrial sectors and better-than-expected consumption trends in Q1 2024 suggest potential bottoming of Mainland China's economy, which offset weaknesses from the property sector.

For policy tailwinds, the concerted rollout of fiscal, monetary, and property-related policies may improve Mainland China's economy further in 2024. Despite China's property market weakness, China reiterated its 2024 real GDP growth target to be around 5%. Mainland China reiterates its motivations to strive for technology innovations, with keen focus on promoting domestic consumptions and levelling the playing field for various enterprises as well as investment on new infrastructure, new urbanization, and green economy.

For innovations, the Chinese government called AI as an important engine for "new productive forces" and was reported to be raising capital for a USD27-billion chip fund. In March, the State Council approved an action plan to promote large-scale equipment renewal (e.g., in construction, infrastructure, transport, and agriculture fields) and upgrade in the industrials sector with central government's financial support. We favor investment opportunities in advanced manufacturing and technology innovation.

For consumptions, we believe consumption may further improve with Mainland China's pro-growth policy stance. In March, the State Council approved its plan to promote trade-in of consumer goods (e.g., automobiles, home appliances). We expect more targeted measures to be rolled out to support growth.

The Fund mentioned in this document is specific to variable life insurance contracts and is not considered a mutual fund. Other factors that affect yield include changes in the credit standing of the issuers and changes in the value of the stocks and dividends received. Further, investments of the Fund may provide that their values be determined based on prices or yields of other securities, instruments or foreign currencies, and such provisions may result in negative fluctuations in the value of these investments and, in turn, the Fund's yields. Thus, the performance of the separate account(s) is not guaranteed and the value of the policy could be less than the capital invested. THE VARIABLE LIFE POLICYHOLDER SHALL BEAR ALL INVESTMENT RISKS. Past performance of the Fund is not necessarily indicative of future performance. Yields are not guaranteed.
