Market Review

US stocks declined in February amid concern over Russia's aggression in Ukraine, high inflation and the US Federal Reserve Board's pending interest-rate increases. These headwinds overshadowed the positive impact in the US of a gradual migration of the Covid-19 virus from pandemic to endemic status. Within the Standard & Poor's (S&P) 500 Index, nearly all sectors posted declines, notably the communication services and information technology sectors. Conversely, the energy sector rallied as demand outweighed supply, pushing commodity prices sharply higher.

Outlook

We expect the economy to continue to recover, despite current geopolitical tensions and inflationary pressures. In our view, the consumer remains in a healthy position with the ability to weather near-term uncertainty. Plus, pandemic restrictions have begun to ease. We believe long-term, patient investors will be rewarded once market volatility subsides. At period-end, the portfolio remains barbelled between value stocks that stand to benefit from improved economic growth and growth stocks that can gain from secular tailwinds.

The Fund mentioned in this document is specific to variable life insurance contracts and is not considered a mutual fund. Yields depend on interest and foreign exchange rate levels, both of which may fluctuate. Other factors that affect yield include changes in the credit standing of the issuers and changes in the value of the stocks and dividends received. Further, investments of the Fund may provide that their values be determined based on prices or yields of other securities, instruments or foreign currencies, and such provisions may result in negative fluctuations in the value of these investments and, in turn, the Fund's yields. Thus, the performance of the separate account(s) is not guaranteed and the value of the policy could be less than the capital invested. THE VARIABLE LIFE POLICYHOLDER SHALL BEAR ALL INVESTMENT RISKS. Past performance of the Fund is not necessarily indicative of future performance. Yields are not guaranteed.
