Market Review

The US stock market rose in July for the third consecutive month. New trade agreements, notably with Japan and the European Union, and the passage of the One Big Beautiful Bill Act (OBBBA) helped remove some policy uncertainties, boosting investor sentiment. Strong second-quarter corporate earnings reports and expectations for the continued growth of artificial intelligence (AI) fueled added gains. These tailwinds outweighed the US Federal Reserve's (Fed) decision to hold its target overnight interest rate steady amid higher-than-hoped inflation data. Within the broad-based Standard & Poor's (S&P) 500 Index, the information technology and utilities sectors outperformed, benefiting from strong demand for AI, while healthcare and consumer staples stocks declined.

Outlook

We remain cautiously optimistic about the outlook for US stocks, given the progress in trade negotiations and clarity on tax policy. In addition, inflation appears to be in check, easing fears of an imminent economic slowdown. However, we could see more headline-driven market volatility, given remaining macroeconomic and geopolitical uncertainties.

The Fund mentioned in this document is specific to variable life insurance contracts and is not considered a mutual fund. Yields depend on interest and foreign exchange rate levels, both of which may fluctuate. Other factors that affect yield include changes in the credit standing of the issuers and changes in the value of the stocks and dividends received. Further, investments of the Fund may provide that their values be determined based on prices or yields of other securities, instruments or foreign currencies, and such provisions may result in negative fluctuations in the value of these investments and, in turn, the Fund's yields. Thus, the performance of the separate account(s) is not guaranteed and the value of the policy could be less than the capital invested. THE VARIABLE LIFE POLICYHOLDER SHALL BEAR ALL INVESTMENT RISKS. Past performance of the Fund is not necessarily indicative of future performance. Yields are not guaranteed.
