Market Review

US bonds recorded modestly positive returns in January despite considerable interest-rate volatility. The bond market experienced a sell-off early in the month due to strong economic data, including a better-than-expected jobs report, alongside ongoing uncertainty regarding the economic policies of the incoming presidential administration. However, bonds rebounded in the latter half of the month as inflation aligned with expectations and consumer spending fell short of forecasts. Additionally, the US economy grew at a 2.3% annualized rate in the fourth quarter of 2024, marking its slowest growth rate in three quarters. Consequently, the US Federal Reserve (Fed) maintained short-term interest rates at its policy meeting in late January after implementing three rate cuts over the last four months of 2024. Bond yields largely held steady across the maturity spectrum throughout the month. While sector performance was uniformly positive, high-yield corporate bonds and commercial mortgage-backed securities produced significant returns, whereas US Treasury securities and asset-backed securities lagged.

Outlook

Given the ongoing easing cycle by the US Fed, the market is currently assessing the extent and pace of rate cuts by the US Fed. Preferred securities have historically delivered strong returns during US Fed easing periods, except during the Great Financial Crisis. As spreads are currently narrow across most fixed income, it is crucial to emphasize the importance of selecting appropriate securities within a capital structure to generate significant income and safeguard capital. We believe this can be accomplished by holding preferred securities, typically lower in a capital structure, and offering greater spread. They also minimize permanent losses from defaults as they are issued by high-quality companies capable of withstanding challenging financial conditions. Additionally, the flexibility of the preferred security universe allows for allocation across various fixed income sectors and credit levels, making it easier to navigate softer economic environments. We prefer defensive sectors like electric utilities, as they have shown resilience during times of stress and have provided solid downside protection. In summary, there are still appealing opportunities to generate income within credit and spread sectors, with the potential for spread compression and limited risk of permanent capital impairment.

The investment fund option for The Manufacturers Life Insurance Company's variable life insurance product is managed by Manulife Investment Management and Trust Corporation.

The Fund mentioned in this document is specific to variable life insurance contracts and is not considered a mutual fund. Yields depend on interest and foreign exchange rate levels, both of which may fluctuate. Other factors that affect yield include changes in the credit standing of the issuers and changes in the value of the stocks and dividends received. Further, investments of the Fund may provide that their values be determined based on prices or yields of other securities, instruments or foreign currencies, and such provisions may result in negative fluctuations in the value of these investments and, in turn, the Fund's yields. Thus, the performance of the separate account(s) is not guaranteed and the value of the policy could be less than the capital invested. THE VARIABLE LIFE POLICYHOLDER SHALL BEAR ALL INVESTMENT RISKS. Past performance of the Fund is not necessarily indicative of future performance. Yields are not guaranteed.
