Market Review

US bonds declined in May as bond yields rose sharply. The key factor was government wrangling over raising the federal debt ceiling. Congress needed to pass legislation to raise or suspend the debt ceiling before early June to avoid a potential default on US Treasury debt. Although an agreement was eventually reached, an uncertain outcome to the negotiations put investors on edge and sent US Treasury yields soaring, particularly at the short end of the yield curve.

In addition, the US Federal Reserve Board (Fed) raised short-term interest rates in early May, pushing the federal funds rate to its highest level in 16 years. Whilst the US Fed reiterated its vigilance with regard to keeping inflation under control, US Fed officials have also signalled that the central bank may pause its rate hikes in June.

Sector performance was uniformly negative in May, with the US Treasury securities and investment-grade corporate bonds posting the largest declines. Shorter-term sectors such as asset-backed securities fared best during the month.

Outlook

The US Fed continues its path to tighten monetary policy in 2023, but at a slower pace. The full impact of the tightening started early in 2022 and is flowing through the real economy. Consumers and businesses in the US are beginning to feel this tightening. The impact to earnings and balance sheets is uneven, but it is there and broadening out.

Credit metrics supported by strong earnings and low leverage were very healthy for most businesses at the beginning of the year. Earnings deterioration is beginning to put pressure on companies as demand for goods wanes and inflationary pressures impact margins. Most higher quality corporates should be able to withstand softening economic conditions. Companies of lower credit quality will have to carefully navigate worsening conditions compounded by increased required rates of return by the financial markets.

We maintain a favourable view of preferred securities as significantly improved yields should lead to attractive forward returns. Ability to select securities from a broader credit universe and across the capital structure will help navigate the softening landscape and focus on risk-adjusted returns. There is potential for incremental upside in addition to income, as the sector fell under pressure amid bank issues in March, resulting in yields not seen since 2009. Preferred securities are higher quality in nature and offer value compared to higher duration and traditional investment grade areas of the market.

The investment team continues their defensive position stance since 2019, with overweight allocations in areas such as utilities and underweight allocations in the banking sector. The fund is overweight significant financial institutional (SFI) banks and super regional banks, relative to the preferred market. SFI banks are large and have already benefited from the fallout triggered by a regional bank and others. They have been subject to the most stringent capital and liquidity rules, and they provide broad services to clients. Large or super regional banks have been preparing for stricter regulatory requirements following their acquisitions in recent years. This group of banks has benefited from increased profitability, a tradition of strong loan underwriting, and diversified earnings.

The investment fund option for The Manufacturers Life Insurance Company's variable life insurance product is managed by Manulife Investment Management and Trust Corporation.

The Fund mentioned in this document is specific to variable life insurance contracts and is not considered a mutual fund. Yields depend on interest and foreign exchange rate levels, both of which may fluctuate. Other factors that affect yield include changes in the credit standing of the issuers and changes in the value of the stocks and dividends received. Further, investments of the Fund may provide that their values be determined based on prices or yields of other securities, instruments or foreign currencies, and such provisions may result in negative fluctuations in the value of these investments and, in turn, the Fund's yields. Thus, the performance of the separate account(s) is not guaranteed and the value of the policy could be less than the capital invested. THE VARIABLE LIFE POLICYHOLDER SHALL BEAR ALL INVESTMENT RISKS. Past performance of the Fund is not necessarily indicative of future performance. Yields are not guaranteed.
