Market Review

The Philippine Stock Exchange Index is down -0.75% MTD in August, settling at 5,884.18 points. Negative sentiment from weak 2Q economic and corporate results led to profit taking towards the latter part of the month, offsetting the 3.8% rise in the first two weeks following the reposition of the Modified Enhanced Community Quarantine (MECQ) for NCR and neighboring provinces to control the spread of COVID-19.

Congress in August passed the Bayanihan Act 2 and is awaiting President Rodrigo Duterte's signature. Bayanihan 2 allots P140bn in additional funds to support sectors such as agriculture, tourism, and disease control. Other stimulus bills pending in Congress include the CREATE Bill (lowering of corporate income taxes), the GUIDE Bill (creates a bailout fund and corporate guarantees) and an additional stimulus to specific MSME sectors, ARISE Bill.

Under the current GCQ restrictions, we are seeing improved mobility restrictions which bodes well for economic output. PAGCOR, the gaming regulator, also allowed integrated casino resorts to begin trial operations for invited guests of up to 30% capacity starting last August 24. Capacity limits are still in place for businesses and public transportation that are operating under the current General Community Quarantine (GCQ) restrictions.

August inflation (2.4%) printed on the low end of market expectations as Metro Manila was placed on a tighter lockdown for the first half of the month due to the rapid increase in Covid 19 cases in the Philippines. While the stricter quarantine measures were in response to the call of medical frontlines to help flatten the curve, economic activity and possible bounce of the Philippine economy in 3Q was stunted.

Outlook

We remain cautious on the equity market as the COVID-19 pandemic continues to impact the country's economic output. We continue to be mindful of factors that will impact the country's GDP such as unemployment trends and signs of weak consumer sentiment arising from the effects of prolonged mobility restrictions. We remain weighted in resilient sectors but look to take advantage of cheap valuations to accumulate stocks in sectors that will be the new winners once the economy reopens and recovers.

Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) Governor Diokno has indicated that ample liquidity coupled with the prevailing interest rate levels in the Philippines is supportive of economic activity in the Philippines. In addition, inflation is expected to remain benign and well within the BSP's target range. Against this background, we expect bond yields to remain at current levels as the country hopes to see an improvement in the Covid 19 cases following the lockdown.
