Market Review

The PSEi continued to rally in August, rising by 4.2% month on month, fueled by the encouraging 2Q22 corporate earnings results and abating concerns over inflation given the correction in global commodity prices.

Inflation dropped to 6.3% in August, a slight improvement from the 6.4% inflation in the prior month. Falling prices of key global commodities such as crude oil, wheat, and building materials helped ease inflation concerns. For example, retail pump prices of gasoline dropped by around 12% in Manila in July and another 2% in August. In addition, the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas mentioned that inflation could peak by 4Q22. Meanwhile, the aggressive rate hiking cycle could be over after the BSP raised policy rates by 50bps this August then stating they will be raising rates at 25bps clips going forward if any.

The second quarter earnings reporting season ended in August on a positive note. Majority of corporates reported strong second quarter earnings results. What was evident was the strong consumer spending brought by the full reopen of the economy, pushing revenues significantly higher. Consequently, majority of consumer companies, especially in the discretionary segment, saw both strong topline growth that was able to offset margins. Indirectly, the shopping mall segment performed well to the point that the leaders in this space have removed all rental concessions last July. In addition, the financial industry saw an acceleration in loan growth coupled by net interest margin expansion. On the other hand, the sectors that performed poorly were the broadband segment as it was hit by high churn, companies with high commodity exposure in their input cost such as the leading instant noodles provider, and companies with high dollar debt exposure due to the weakness in the local currency.

Local peso bond yields moved higher across the curve as the market digests the additional supply of PHP420.4Bn from the Retail Treasury Bond (RTB) 5.5 year issuance. In terms of macro, inflation printed at 6.3% in August, slightly lower from the 6.4% in July. Consequently, the BSP raised its inflation forecast from 5% to 5.4% this year but lowered it from 4.2% to 4% in 2023. Second quarter GDP growth, on the other hand, printed at 7.4% as global headwinds, particularly imported inflation on energy and food contributed to noticeable slowdown from 8.4% growth seen in the first quarter. The government forecasts 6.5-7.5% growth this year (vs. 7%-8% target/previous forecast) and acknowledged that the growth target is a big challenge to achieve given challenging global developments.

Outlook

We have a positive view towards Philippine equities given the improving macroeconomic picture. This is reinforced by the positive 2Q22 corporate earnings results that showed sustained domestic consumption recovery from the pandemic. Meanwhile, we are cognizant that the risks are not entirely gone as inflation remains high and global central banks are still hiking interest rates albeit at a slower pace. There are also concerns over the health of the global economy with the risk of recession in the West, possibly triggering a risk aversion towards equities. However, the valuations of the Philippine equity market remain attractive with the index trading at 13.5x forward price to earnings, a discount from the historical average of 16x.

For bonds, against this backdrop we prefer to stay cautious and be opportunistic in adding duration. Supply risk remains in the local bond market due to large programmed domestic government borrowing at P1.65T next year.
