Market Review

In June, the Philippine Stock Exchange Index (PSEi) increased by 0.62% to 6,364.94, driven by a 25-basis point policy rate cut by the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas and positive developments on local inflation. The market hit a low of 6,218 on June 23 after reaching a peak of 6,566 the previous month due to tensions in Iran and Israel.

Inflation continued to decline, reaching 1.4% year-on-year in June. This brought the year-to-date inflation rate to 1.9%, below the BSP's 2-4% target and market expectations. Food inflation in June increased by 0.1% year-on-year, compared to the previous month's 0.7% year-on-year increase, mainly due to a sharp drop in rice prices that offset slight increases in meat and fish. However, utility costs rose due to higher transmission charges, and fuel prices increased sharply because of Middle East tensions, slight peso depreciation, and local pump price adjustments.

The Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas continued its monetary easing with another 25-basis point rate cut. This marks the second consecutive meeting where the BSP has lowered policy rates, signaling the possibility of at least one more reduction anytime this year to bolster economic growth. The Monetary Board reduced the policy rate from 5.50% to 5.25%. BSP Governor Remolona indicated that the outlook for inflation has moderated, and expectations are well-anchored. Consequently, the BSP has revised its inflation forecast for this year down to 1.6% from the previous 2.4%.

Recent developments in the Israel and Iran conflict have dampened investor risk sentiment, including the Philippine local bonds. The local yield curve continues to remain steep on weaker demand on the long ends amid the ongoing tension in the Middle East. However, June inflation printed at 1.4%, slightly higher than May's 1.3% but well below the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas' (BSP) 2-4% target. With rice prices moderating, we anticipate local inflation will remain slightly below the 2% of the BSP's target range. Following this, BSP Governor Remollona's dovish stance suggests the possibility of two additional rate cuts by the end of 2025.

Outlook

Inflation and tariffs remain key concerns for the market. Given the fluidity of the tariff announcements from the United States, the market remains very tentative on its effects, which could have significant and widespread effects beginning the second half of 2025. Investors are keeping a close eye on further developments as we approach August 1, when higher reciprocal trade tariffs announced last July 7 could take effect.

We think that the Philippines demonstrates resilience compared to its ASEAN neighbors, largely due to its relatively low direct exposure to U.S. goods exports. Additionally, any further trade escalations from the U.S. may be mitigated by President Ferdinand Marcos Jr.'s upcoming visit to the U.S. Any favorable trade agreements resulting from these negotiations could further enhance market returns in the latter half of 2025.

With rice prices moderating, we anticipate inflation will remain slightly below the 2% of the BSP's target range. Following this, BSP Governor Remollona's dovish stance suggests the possibility of two additional rate cuts by the end of 2025. In the absence of any fresh catalysts and with inflation risk minimized, we expect the market to continue to look to global developments for direction. In the near term, we will closely monitor US President Trump's tariff policies as these could sway market sentiment and yield direction.
