Market Review

The local stock market index closed at 8,046, up 0.6% for the month of July. The market was able to break out of its 6-month consolidation range, closing above the 8,200 resistance level for the first time in 2019, but eventually succumbed to profit-taking during the latter part of the month. Nonetheless, a rosier outlook for the second half has helped boost investor sentiment with inflation tracking lower and the peso remaining stable. Helping boost equities further are global central banks issuing dovish statements and hinting at keeping accommodative monetary policies for longer. Inflation rate slowed in June to 2.7% YoY versus May's 3.2%. The BSP further hinted that third quarter inflation could settle below the BSP's target range of 2-4% because of high-base effect from last year's multi-high rates. This should be supported by the significant drop in oil prices as well as the cost of rice which continue to decline with the ongoing harvest season and the continued arrival of imports. In its June 20 monetary policy meeting, the BSP revised its inflation forecast for FY19 to 2.7% from 2.9% on expectations of lower global oil prices and the peso's appreciation. Philippine 10-year bond yields continue to decline and are beginning to breach below 5%, further supporting a potential equities market re-rating, following a much more benign inflation outlook.

With the US Federal Reserve (Fed) clearly signaling a rate cut for the end of July, numerous central banks, including the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) have followed suit. The BSP's Monetary Board (MB) cut policy rates by 25bps at its May meeting but paused at its July 10 meeting, noting that it's simply a matter of timing for the next policy cut. The next MB meeting is scheduled on August 8, with investors pricing in a high probability of a 25bps policy cut.

Against the loosening policy backdrop, local bonds continued its rally with yields lower by an average of 43bps across the curve. Strong buying momentum emerged given the dovish global sentiment. The injection of approximately PHP 45Bn into the market, as the last 50bp cut tranche of the Reserve Requirement Ratio took effect at the end of July, may have also contributed to the lower yield environment.

Outlook

We have turned more bullish on the Philippine stock market amidst the country's improving macro fundamentals. The lower inflation outlook should give the BSP sufficient room to further adopt a more loose monetary policy stance going forward. Moreover, there seems to be minimal signs for major potential disappointments in the upcoming second quarter earnings season.

With our more bullish outlook on the market, the fund looks to increase exposure in liquid names that are more likely going to be acting as market proxies, particularly for foreign investors, while also remaining well-positioned in select names that should deliver during the upcoming earnings season. We have also lessened our cash position to increase the funds' ability to participate in market rallies.

Outlook for the global yield environment seems to be promising following the Fed's decision to ease policy rates by 25bps last July 31. Recent re-escalation of U.S. and China trade war may also prompt 1-2 more rate cuts this year. Outlook for the Philippine bond market also remains positive with the BSP having ample room to ease following last year's 175bp policy rate hike. As long as inflation continues to moderate and the Philippine currency remains relatively stable, we can expect a further downtrend in peso bond yields for the rest of 2019. In light of the current environment, we will maintain our longer duration positioning vis-a-vis the benchmark and will opportunistically take profit on select securities as the rally continues.
