Market Review

The Philippine market was up 3.3% for the month with the PSEi closing at 7,362. Market weakness was observed in the beginning of the month mostly due to the surge in COVID-19 cases from the Omicron variant and Metro Manila was placed under a higher restriction level. Nevertheless, we did observe that hospitalization utilization rate did not reach critical levels despite logging in the highest daily record of cases of 45,000 per day. In the last week of the month, the equities market rallied by 2% on the back of declining daily cases as Omicron variant turned out to be less severe than prior variants. As such, Metro Manila restrictions were shortly downgraded to lower restriction levels by the start of February.

The recovery of the economy appears to be underway with the sustained improvement in macro indicators such as GDP growth, loan growth and unemployment rate while inflation is expected to remain within government's target of 2-4%. 4Q21 GDP growth reached 7.7%, significantly higher than consensus expectations of 6.3%. The main drivers for growth was household consumption which improved to 7.5% during amidst high mobility during the period. December loan growth accelerated to 4.6% YoY, the highest level since Aug 2020. On the other hand, the growth factors are offset by increasing input costs such as crude oil coupled by weaker Philippine currency. Although latest inflation print in January was only 3%, outlook could turn with oil prices reaching new highs since 2014.

During the month, there were a few notable movements in property from Ayala Land and Megaworld. Ayala Corporation and Ayala Land had a share swap agreement with the former giving Makati properties among others in exchange for ALI shares. As for Megaworld, it announced that it will be acquiring a 2.2has property from Manila Jockey Club in Sta. Cruz Manila. In addition, Robinsons Retail Holdings will buyout the stake of its Ministop partner. Note that Ministop Japan is exiting the region to focus its efforts in improving profitability in its local operations in Japan. Lastly, the Philippine government is lifting the ban on foreign travelers to boost tourism.

The whole yield curve shifted lower by an average of 14bps as the two bond maturities in January amounting to about PHP150Bn flooded the local market. The extra boost of liquidity amid an improvement in inflation expectations triggered the demand for the government bonds. The weaker Philippine Peso also provided an opportunity for foreign investors to reinvest back into the local bond market, contributing to the lower bond yields.

Outlook

We remain constructive that the economy will further reopen in 2022. We continue to see a decline in COVID-19 cases while the wide availability of vaccines should be able to help reduce the impact of COVID-19 to mobility and the economy. As of end January, the country has over 59m fully vaccinated individuals and around 7m have already received booster shots. The country will also start vaccination on ages 5-11 by February. Meanwhile, we continue to see a decline in daily COVID-19 cases into early February. Additionally, the upcoming elections and subsequent campaign spending could potentially provide a boost in corporate earnings. Other investment themes, we are in the look out for in 2022 include digitalization, renewable energy, and infrastructure.

However, rumors of a possible Retail Treasury Bond (RTB) issuance sometime in March has tempered the positive sentiment and investors have turned cautious amidst this noise. Historically, the Bureau of Treasury has issued an RTB in 1Q for the past 3 years and we expect 2022 to be the same. Against this backdrop, we will continue to keep a neutral duration position vis-a-vis the benchmark as we wait for further developments on the RTB.
