Market Review

The Philippine Stock Equity index (PSEi) year-to-date is down 1.61%, ending at 6,321 level. The PSEi ended the month of September up 2.4% after it sank 6.3% the prior month. Year to date, the weak market performance can still be attributed to ongoing concerns surrounding a challenging economic backdrop presented by heightened inflation and uncertainties on the path of interest rates for the remainder of 2023.

September inflation rose further to 6.1%, an acceleration from 5.3% in August due to a continued rise in food (rice) and transport (oil) prices. The inflation figure for September came in at the top of the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas' (BSP) forecasts for the month of 5.3% to 6.1% which accelerated to a month-on-month growth of 1%.

On food prices, President Marcos has lifted the price ceiling on rice on account of increasing rice supplies and easing import costs. The price ceiling on rice was initially imposed last August 2023 nationwide under Executive Order 39 as the retail price of certain varieties of rice surpassed P60 per kilogram. The set price ceiling was at P41 per kilogram for regular milled rice and P45 per kilogram for well-milled rice.

The BSP kept policy rates unchanged at 6.25% at the last Monetary Board meeting held on September, however the BSP further said that it is ready to resume monetary tightening to prevent broadening of price pressures and limit the emergence of second round effect of inflation in the coming months following the recent price increases for rice in September. Governor Remolona further signaled that another off-cycle rate hike is possible leading into the Monetary Board's next meeting in November. The upside risks to the inflation outlook include the potential impact of transport fare adjustments, minimum wage adjustments in areas outside of Metro Manila along with the ongoing impact of El Nino weather conditions on food and utility rates.

Banking lending growth continued to slow down to 7.2% in August from 7.7% in July. This is the slowest growth rate in bank lending since December 2021. The slowdown was led by decreasing loans to production activities, growing by 5.5% in August from 6.2% in July. Consumer loans, however, grew by 22.7% in August.

Local bond yields slightly rose with the curve flattening in September as the market prices in the likelihood of another hike by the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP). Persistent increase in inflation, as evidenced by September's 6.1% print, raises the likelihood of an off-cycle BSP rate hike this month. The possibility of a rate hike is further underpinned by the BSP's hawkish statements indicating its willingness to tolerate slower growth to tame inflation as inflationary pressures intensify, largely driven by the surge in rice prices and volatile global oil prices. The BSP now contends with a challenging combination of slowing growth and high inflation, reflected in its forecasts of 4.9% growth and an average of 5.8% inflation this year.

Outlook

The domestic equity market would likely see continued volatility given the headwinds of rising inflation and interest rates. Additionally, we think that any decision by the BSP to raise policy rates by its next meeting in November is a step in the right direction to keep inflation under control. Thus, any near-term weakness in sentiment can be an opportunity to accumulate in the equity market as the PSEi continues to trade at attractive valuations supported by stable earnings growth for 2023.

We also expect another hike from the Federal Reserve due to the robust jobs data and elevated inflation in the U.S. Given the likelihood for interest rates to stay higher for longer, we expect the local bond market to stay volatile and for overall sentiment to be lukewarm until yearend. Nevertheless, for investors with a longer investment horizon, current yield levels remain very attractive with our view of slowing inflation and a rate cut in second half of next year.
