Why Peso Wealth Optimizer Funds?

Investing through a target date approach simplifies asset allocation for an average investor. The asset mix changes over time, becoming more conservative as the investor's financial milestone draws closer.

The change in asset allocation over time is called the glide path which Manulife designed specifically for these funds.

The glide path's objectives include:

- To maximize wealth accumulation prior to target date
- To minimize risk as the target date approaches
- To make wealth last long enough to support any financial needs beyond the chosen target date

Market Review

The Philippine Stock Exchange Index (PSEi) decreased by -1.68% in October, closing at 7,142. Despite this monthly decrease, the PSEi still maintained a positive year-to-date performance of 13.43%. Earlier in October, the index reached a four-year high of 7,554, buoyed by positive investor sentiment following a lower-than-expected September inflation rate of 1.9%. However, the market's strong rally was halted as attention shifted towards the potential market impact and uncertainties surrounding the recently concluded US elections. Additionally, the realization of another anticipated 25 basis points rate cut by the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas did not sustain the market's momentum in the prior months as the 7,500 level became a significant resistance point for the PSEi.

The Consumer Price Index for October increased by 2.3% year-on-year. Food was the only category that increased by 2.9% with all other categories showing either flat or lower growth year-on-year.

The third quarter corporate earnings results were reported mixed overall with relatively more disappointments than expected, dampening the optimistic market sentiment from the previous months. The banking sector reported healthy growth and record profits while telcos, property and holding companies' results were broadly inline. However, the consumer staples and discretionary disappointed, showing delayed recovery in consumer spending despite the recent low inflation rate.

Local bond yields rose in October and the curve generally steepened as the sell-off in U.S. Treasuries spilled over to local markets. Nevertheless, government bond spreads over U.S. Treasuries have substantially narrowed as the market weighs between a dovish Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) and uncertainties from a Trump presidency in the U.S. While outlook on local inflation remains benign, it quickened to 2.3% YoY in October as recent strong typhoons hit domestic agricultural production. As expected, domestic output was also affected, with GDP growth decelerating to 5.2% in 3Q from 6.4% in 2Q.

Outlook

We remain positive on Philippine equities following the recent drop in the market. The outcome of the US elections and the strong US dollar have already been factored in, with the PSEi retracing by nearly 6% since its high on October 7. Despite this, the market is still trading at attractive valuations. Since hitting a low of 6,158 in June, the PSEi is still up by 15% as of the end of October. Once near-term volatility subsides, we anticipate buying opportunities to emerge in preparation for 2025, when we expect central banks to continue their monetary easing trajectory, albeit at a more gradual pace.

We expect global market developments to continue to drive the local market in the short-term. Looking ahead, while the weaker-than-expected GDP growth may urge the BSP to continue easing monetary policy, there is a risk of the cut being delayed if a weaker Peso persists following a Trump win. Consequently, we change our outlook from positive to slight positive over the medium-term, while recognizing heightened volatility in the short-term as the market digests the implications of another Trump regime.
